MANAGER'S COMMENT

During 2019, one of the main changes in the fund's asset allocation has been an increased exposure to healthcare. The sector currently makes up around 15% of the fund, well in excess of the close to 10% it represented at the start of the year. As is often the case, the increased conviction is a direct result of the divergence between market sentiment and actual performance. The healthcare sector is increasingly unloved by investors, who stress heightened regulatory risk in the form of drug pricing reform. This pessimistic attitude stands in sharp contrast to the actual financial performance of the sector. The average company guidance for the healthcare components in the fund calls for +7.5% sales growth and +14% earnings per share growth for 2019. These are hardly numbers to complain about. As for the future, it is important to bear in mind that Asia Pacific currently makes up some 10-15% of turnover for the companies in question. The combination of a rising middle class, a lack of local drug manufacturing expertise and a high prevalence of debilitating diseases such as diabetes and cancer, are creating a highly favourable backdrop for growth that can be sustained for years to come. In conclusion, the healthcare sector today represents a rare investment opportunity for those willing and able to take the longer-term view, unfazed by potential near-term regulatory risk, which in any case already seems priced in at the moment.

The subfund's risk level reflects the following factor(s):

Equity investments have greater volatility and higher risk than investments in bonds and money market instruments. The risk level does not reflect the potential impact of unusual market conditions or unforeseen events that may increase risk or trigger other risks such as:

- Counterparty risk: the subfund can lose money as a result of the failure of a market player with which it does business.
- Credit risk: risk associated with bonds becoming worthless when the issuer of the bond is not able to repay its debt on maturity.
- Liquidity risk: some financial securities may be impossible to sell quickly at a given time or may have to be sold at a discount.
- Management risk: under abnormal market conditions, the usual management techniques may be ineffective or unfavourable.
- Operating risk: in any market, and especially in the emerging markets, the subfund may lose some or all of its money if there is a failure in the custody of assets or in case of fraud, corruption, political actions or any other adverse event.
