MANAGER'S COMMENT

Analog Devices presented their new long-term goals for the next five years at their investor day on April 5th. Revenue targets moved up significantly from mid-single digit historically to a new range of 7-10% annual revenue growth. This follows peers such as Texas Instruments and NXP Semiconductors who have also increased their growth models at recent investor days. Semiconductors in general are seeing elevated growth levels due to their ever-increasing penetration in autos, data centres as well as industrial applications. The good news is that this higher revenue growth is accompanied by strong and rising margins, with Analog Devices calling for a new operating margin range of 42%-50% which is substantially higher than the previous range of 39%-45%. Even more impressive is the 70% gross margin floor, claiming that even in more dire economic times, gross margins should remain above 70%. The combination of these revenue and margin targets leads to a 15 USD EPS number in fiscal 2027, equivalent to a doubling of earnings per share versus the 2021 base. All in, these goals are a very impressive continuation of the successful path that Analog Devices has been on for several decades. Culturally, the company is admired for its sustainability and consistency, having had only 3 different CEO's and 2 different chairmen since its founding 56 years ago. Aside from Analog Devices, the fund also holds shares of TSMC and NXP Semiconductors, with a cumulative weight in the chip sector of >6%.

The value of an investment in a sub-fund increases or decreases over time. At the time of resale, the price of your shares may be less than the original price, representing a loss. If you invest in a sub-fund whose currency is different from your own, exchange rate fluctuations can also reduce your gains or increase your losses.

The above risk level is calculated on the basis of the sub-fund's volatility over the medium term (i.e. on the basis of actual changes in its value over the last five years or on a simulation, if the subfund was created within that period). The volatility of the sub-fund may increase or decrease over time, which may change its risk level.

The subfund's risk level reflects the following factor(s):

- Equity investments have greater volatility and higher risk than investments in bonds and money market instruments. The risk level does not reflect the potential impact of unusual market conditions or unforeseen events that may increase risk or trigger other risks such as:
- Counterparty risk: the subfund can lose money as a result of the failure of a market player with which it does business.
 - Credit risk: risk associated with bonds becoming worthless when the issuer of the bond is not able to repay its debt on maturity.
 - Liquidity risk: some financial securities may be impossible to sell quickly at a given time or may have to be sold at a discount.
 - Management risk: under abnormal market conditions, the usual management techniques may be ineffective or unfavourable.
 - Operating risk: in any market, and especially in the emerging markets, the subfund may lose some or all of its money if there is a failure in the custody of assets or in case of fraud, corruption, political actions or any other adverse event.

⁴ Ongoing charge: charges taken from the subfund over a year (including management fees).
